ROYAL WELCOME

When Samantha David, head of WS Development's Up Markets, set out to curate the tenant mix at its new Royal Poinciana Plaza in a restored, Fifties-era enclave designed by John Volk, she imagined a small European town with butcher shops, bakeries and boutiques. Her lifestyle approach resulted in an eclectic, delightful shopping experience, where one can buy a Birkin and a banana in one fell swoop.

"Our goal was to create a place that would keep people coming back for more and that's different from anything they've seen before," said David, of nearly 60 restaurants, stores and services centered on tropically landscaped courtyards. Established local and international brands meet every whim. They have their choice of fast casual or fine dining, too—finger food from Miami's popular Coyo Taco or $46 veal Milanese at Sant Ambroeus. Several names are new to the island, as Theory, Assouline, Saint Laurent, 100% Capri and many more make their debut here. The seductive setting even wooed Hermès to relocate from Worth Avenue and Sotheby's to exhibit large-scale, outdoor sculptures in December.

NORTH STAR

What do athletes Michael Jordan, Ernie Els and Tucker Frederickson, winemaker Bill Terlato and philanthropist Patrick Park have in common? They're all partners in 1000 North, a restaurant and invitation-only private club overlooking Jupiter's inlet and lighthouse. Besides access to the club upstairs, members receive concierge services and dockside privileges. 1000north.com

YOUTHFUL THINKING

Known for its cabaret shows and Carleton Varney interiors, The Colony Hotel celebrates its 70th birthday by doing what any respectable Palm Beach socialite would—pretending to be younger. Owners Andrew and Sarah Wetenhall introduced wellness amenities like poolside yoga, paddle boards and bespoke bikes. As the parents of three children, they also offer new kid-friendly activities and a welcome package, including a stuffed souvenir of mascot JB inspired by the late architect Addison Mizner's pet monkey, Johnnie Brown.

"We're hosting a kids-only New Year's Eve party, a treat for parents too," said Sarah. thecolonypalmbeach.com
